

EVERETT LORD

1918 - 1994

Everett Lord was an imposing figure in the legal community, known for his impact on family and domestic law in Southeast Texas. In 1976, Lord's peers chose him to serve as interim judge for the Jefferson County Family District Court. To commemorate 44 years as an outstanding family and domestic lawyer, The State Bar of Texas hung a plaque in 1995 bearing Lord's name in the State Bar of Texas building in Austin. He was an author of many articles for the Texas Bar Journal, taught family law at Lamar University and assisted in preparing the state exam for board certification in family law in Texas. Lord served in World War II in the Pacific Theater and retired from the Navy as a Commander. His military career spanned 28 years of active and inactive service.

Lord was born in Port Arthur and raised in Beaumont. With a father who served as a criminal district court judge, Everett Lord was introduced to the legal profession at a young age and received a law degree himself in 1941 from the University of Texas School of Law.

“Everett Lord is described as a man who was always willing to go the extra mile to help someone, we will never know all the people he helped along the way, because he never wanted recognition or fanfare for a good deed. That, in my opinion, is the mark of a true legend.”

Lamar University President James Simmons